

Practice Groups

Communications, Energy & Utility

Having the benefit of decades of insight and experience, our group understands the opportunities and challenges facing competitive companies in restructured markets that are opening to competition. Members of our group have actively participated in shaping the environment for these new markets, both at the federal level and in Pennsylvania. We have a reservoir of know-how and initiative to develop innovative business solutions to issues and concerns that you may need to overcome.

We understand the regulatory process and when it's the right approach for competitors to pursue; we know how to help you get started; and, we can offer savvy advice to help make your business plan a success. We are involved in every major regulatory proceeding on communications, energy and other utility issues in Pennsylvania, and we routinely provide advice on federal policy initiatives.

The Communications, Energy and Utility Practice Group consists of members of the Rhoads & Sinon LLP law firm and provides legal services concerning Pennsylvania and federal communications, energy and utility issues.
